

TROOPS RESTED AFTER FIGHTS

Russians and Japanese Are Almost Worn Out with Long Struggle of Past Week.

MAY RECALL GEN. KUROPATKIN

Reports From St. Petersburg Announce the General Staff Is Not Pleased with His Recent Maneuvers.

(Special by Scripps-Mellie.)

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—A dispatch from Mukden says the Japanese have crossed the shakho and are now resting. It is also announced that only the Russian and Japanese outposts are in direct contact. Thousands of Russian wounded are being sent north. General Kuropatkin's retreat has been successful and he and his army are now safe. The Russo-Chinese bank of Mukden has been closed and the civilians are preparing to leave the city. A dispatch from Rome says that Tokyo announces that the two armies are now resting and that the Japanese have reached Mukden safely. Little fighting is reported as occurring today. Another dispatch from Tokyo says that the Russian expedition from Kamschatka, which visited the island of Senhu during the absence of the men and killed women and children and burned all the houses. There is no official confirmation for this however.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—General Kuropatkin, broken down by the strain of the campaign, is to be relieved of his command. His army will be cut in two sections.

London, Sept. 9.—With General Kuroki hurrying shells into the Russian ranks from the east and General Oku pouring a rain of fire into the czar's ranks from the west, the fight continues. All day yesterday a terrific fight continued just south of Mukden and the Russians are reported to have lost more than 1,000 dead and wounded. With the coming of nightfall the firing ceased and the tired Russians again took up their march.

Several Russian detachments have utterly refused to continue the fight north of Mukden, as they are completely overcome with fatigue. General Kuropatkin, it is reported, has established a portion of his worn-out troops in the fortifications of the town, while the bulk of his almost disorganized army is hastening to Tieling, where, it is said, the Russian commander intends to make a stand against the Japanese, should they continue to chase that far north.

Fresh troops from Harbin have been rushed to Tieling, and will endeavor to stand off the relentless Japanese until the dispirited army of Kuropatkin can make its way north to Harbin.

On an average, eighty coaches of wounded are being rushed to Harbin daily, many dying in the coaches. The Russians are planning to make a stand at Tieling if they are compelled to evacuate Mukden. Thousands of Chinese are being compelled to work day and night constructing defenses on all sides of Tieling, by a strongly fortified position may be ready for the bulk of the retreating army when they arrive. It is now believed that a great battle will take place there.

Mukden is in dire panic. Filled with defeated soldiers, hundreds worn out by the long fight, they would rather surrender than continue the retreat. The city is filled with the wildest rumors. One report is that General Kuroki has been killed and that two Japanese generals have been taken prisoners. It is believed that the reports were circulated by the Russian generals in the hope of cheering their men, as no confirmation is obtainable.

As the armies continue to race northward to Tie Pass, forty miles north of Mukden, it becomes of supreme importance to Kuropatkin that the doors of his retreat be closed there. In the event of defeat he is forced west into Mongolia. It is reported that in order to protect his army against possible catastrophe the Russian troops at Harbin have taken possession of Tie Pass.

Fighting Has Ceased

A later dispatch from Mukden states that the fighting has ceased, and that Kuropatkin with his entire army is moving northward to Tieling where he will occupy the fortifications and await the coming of the Japanese. There is much uncertainty concerning the movements of the Japanese. It is impossible to say whether there will be another battle here or further north.

General Kuropatkin reports to the war office at St. Petersburg that his whole army has reached Mukden without the loss of a single gun. Many Rumors

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—This has been a day of many rumors, with a few official facts interspersed. One of the rumors which caused more or less rejoicing was that General Kuroki's flanking column east of Mukden had met with a severe reverse and that the Japanese general who has been so successful against the czar's army has been killed in action.

The gratification over this report would have been greater had it not been for the many previous reports, spread in the same way, of Russian successes, which afterward proved without foundation. So far as can be learned here this is another canard. Another report which seems to have more basis is that the Japanese have suffered another reverse at Port Arthur. General Fock and General Stoessel are easily the most popular officers in Russia today.

The fact that General Kuropatkin is holding back the Japanese gives rise to the hope in some quarters that the tide of Japanese invasion may be stayed here. This hope is not shared, however, by high army officials. They say that all General Kuropatkin is aiming to do now is to hold the Japanese in check until he can make good his retrograde movement on Tieling, and this there is every prospect of accomplishing. Military men here express the highest admiration of General Kuropatkin's success in withdrawing from Liaoyang.

Unskilled Labor Loses a Cent and a Half an Hour Wages—Unions Not Recognized.

(Special by Scripps-Mellie.)

Omaha, Sept. 9.—The end of the butchers' strike is disastrous to the unskilled men. They draw nineteen cents when they went out and will return to work for seventeen and a half. The skilled men's wages remain unchanged. The packers say they will take all the men back as fast as they are needed. It is reported, however, that about 750 men who were active in the strike will not be taken back.

This morning President Donnelly telephoned the news calling off the strike in all the western packing house centers. The men began returning to work in both the plants of the "Big Five" and the Independent. Acting under orders of the leaders 2,500 returned to places in the independent plants. The union stock yards transit company in Chicago took back 325 men out of the four hundred who made application. It was considered that the company refused to recognize the union.

ENGINEER RUNS DOWN AND KILLS HIS NIECE

Makes Desperate Effort to Save Life of His Relative and Collapses When Engine Strikes Her.

(Special by Scripps-Mellie.)

Elgin, Ill., Sept. 9.—Miss Anna Roycroft, 18 years old, was run down and instantly killed by an engine in charge of her uncle, Taylor Sergeant. The tragedy so affected his mind that Engineer Sergeant collapsed with his hand on the emergency brake. He is completely prostrated, and the attending physicians fear he may not recover from the terrible shock.

Sergeant, was driving his engine near the city limits of Elgin, and had split on steam until the train was splitting the shadows at a furious rate of speed. Suddenly there appeared in the glare of his headlights the familiar figure of his favorite niece. The girl was walking on the track, and it was blowing at the time prevented her from hearing the rumble of the approaching train.

Like a madman Sergeant reversed the engine and applied the emergency brakes, well knowing in his frenzy that even by wrecking the entire train he could not hope to save the girl's life. An instant later the mangled body of his niece soared in the air and went swirling past the window of the cab.

The engineer dropped unconscious at the sight. When the passengers and crew, who had been thrown from their seats by the sudden stoppage of the train, rushed forward to the engine they found the fireman bending over Sergeant, who had to be placed immediately in the care of physicians. The body of the girl was found fifty feet from the track. Miss Roycroft was a singer of local repute, and had gained distinction as a painter.

There is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage. Princess Christian is now on her way to visit her son's tomb. She is expected to arrive here Sept. 22. A guard has been placed around the prince's grave.

NEW BATTLE ENDS SAME AS THE OLD

Third Battle of Bull Run Ends in Victory for the Browns by Decisive Marks.

(Special by Scripps-Mellie.)

Gainesville, W. Va., Sept. 9.—The first battle of Bull Run has been repeated. General Bell, commanding the browns, this morning, won a great victory over the blues, which he found shortly after daybreak very strongly entrenched on the old Bull Run battlefield. By nine o'clock the battle had been fought, and General Bell had more than retrieved himself for the defeat of Tuesday. The battle began with full force at daybreak. The browns pushed forward two miles and drove back the skirmish line of the blues. The blues occupied what appeared to be an impracticable position. One brigade of the browns was nearly annihilated, but inflicted severe loss to the blues. Gen. Bell started a left flanking movement which the umpires decided was successful. A detachment of browns swam a river and got in the rear of the blues and nearly captured General Grant. Gen. Corbin then ordered the men back to camp. The forces will break up tomorrow.

MEAT STRIKE ENDS WITH PACKERS DECIDED VICTORS

The Butchers Give Up After Eight Weeks of Strife—Rush To Get Places Back.

(Special by Scripps-Mellie.)

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 9.—The great meat strike, which involved 60,000 men and women and lasted more than eight weeks, is ended. The strikers will return to work Monday.

President Donnelly announced the end of the struggle last evening, but until the unions have been officially notified today, none of the members can accept employment in the packing plants.

The calling off of the strike came after a twelve hour session of the allied trades conference board, and was the most dramatic feature of the great strike.

Early in the day yesterday, President Donnelly and Vice President C. E. Schmidt informed the board that the general executive board of the Butcher Workmen had agreed to call the strike off on the verbal agreement made with the packers through J. Ogden Armour.

CONDITIONS OF PEACE

These conditions were: Union to call off the strike. The packers to take back men as needed. Skilled workers to receive the same rate of wages paid before the strike. Besides this, there was a verbal understanding between Mr. Armour and President Donnelly that the wages of unskilled laborers will be taken up as soon as possible.

It is said that but few strikers will be in the yards Monday morning to greet the returning strikers.

The Union Stockyard & Transit company will take back all the livestock handlers as fast as possible.

NO EFFECT ON ALLIED TRADES

What effect the calling off of the strike by the butcher workmen will have upon the allied trades is now unknown. The motion to settle the strike affects only the butcher workmen. The Allied Trades conference board, but decided that the delegates of the Allied Trades would have to submit the proposition to their respective unions.

Early in the day the report that the strike would end yesterday was circulated in all the plants. Crowds of strike breakers rushed to the time keepers for their time checks. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon four special trainloads of strike breakers left the yards.

STABLING GREAT ENGINES DAILY

LOCOMOTIVES RECEIVE GREAT CARE AFTER A LONG RUN.

HOW THE WORK IS DONE

Keen Watch at the Round House Is Kept for Any Signs of Breakdown.

Life of a valet of valet of one of the big engines that come into the Janesville stations each day pulling long trains of heavy freight is no easy one.

Anyone familiar with railroads has seen the engineer dismount from the cab, oil can in hand, as soon as the train comes to a stop at some way station; then he walks slowly about the ponderous machine, feeling of each bearing with his free hand as he fills the cups with oil; then he, perhaps, taps a valve gently with a wrench or examines critically some ill-working air pump.

As soon as the passengers have left a train that has just come in from a long, dusty run it is hauled out into the yard and the cars are set off on a side track. Men go upon them at once and begin to put them in readiness for the next trip. The windows are washed, cars freed from filth and dirt, seats cleaned, water tanks cared for and the lighting apparatus put in order.

The locomotive, after leaving the cars, proceeds at once to the roundhouse, where the ponderous machine also receives a proper overhauling. First of all, the tanks are filled with water and the fuel supply is replenished. Then a few puffs bring the firebox above the ashpit, where the fire is cleaned and dumped all together. The next thing is to stable the great iron horse.

The roundhouse itself is a most inviting place, with its soot-begrimed walls and smoky interior. These buildings are all constructed on the same general lines, low, one-story structures, generally built of brick and semicircle in shape. Arranged along the inner side of the building is a line of doors each exactly like its neighbor. Under each runs a track of standard gauge, giving the whole an appearance not unlike a spider's web, the center of which is the turntable.

The turntable consists of a pit walled with stone, across which is a bridge free at the ends but balanced at the center on a spindle. Rails are laid across this, as if it were part of the roadbed.

When the fire of the locomotive have been cared for the engineer runs his machine upon the table. With left hand at the throttle he brings it to a stop at the precise point where the hundred tons of steel balance on the spindle that supports the bridge. Then the ponderous mass is slowly revolved until the required track is reached and the engine is "backed into the roundhouse."

Once within the house the engineer's duty is done. He has but to go to the office and report in a book prepared for the purpose any repairs that are needed, and he can go home assured that his machine will be ready for him when he starts on the next run.

A crew of men are kept busy wiping the dust, oil and the running gear of the great machine.

Throughout this work keen watch is kept for any signs of broken parts, and any found are repaired. The hundred or more flues are cleaned by steam pressure. An engine seldom comes to the house that does not need repairs of some sort. The delicate mechanism is constantly becoming broken and unceasing attention is required.

One of the most interesting of all the repairs that are made in some roundhouses is the tightening of the tires on the drive wheels. A heavy wheel is surrounded with a heavy steel tire. These occasionally work loose, and it becomes necessary that they be tightened without sending the locomotive to the shops.

To do this a stream of oil is fed automatically upon the tire and allowed to burn as it runs down. The result is that the whole rim is soon a circle of flame. That is kept up for a long time, and the tire, being heated faster than the wheel itself, expands until the thin piece of sheet iron can be inserted between the wheel and the tire. When the tire has again become cold it contracts and clutches the wheel hard and fast.

The cumbersome repairs, such as turning down worn drive wheels and replacing bolters, go to the shops, where lathes, cranes and forges are to be had. But all the minor troubles are remedied at the "stables," and the foreman of the roundhouse is responsible for the condition of the engines. He is the man to whom all look in an emergency and it is he who must look forward and plan for the repairs in such a way as not to interfere with the regular operation of the trains.

WILL IGNORE THE MEETING MONDAY

No Conservative Republicans Will Be at Meeting of Old State Central Committee.

When the old republican state central committee is called to order in Madison next Monday morning for the purpose of listening to arguments as to which of the two state conventions held last May in Madison is the legal one, they will find that their work will not be very laborious.

The Cook or so-called republican faction will simply ignore the gathering and consequently their side of the controversy will not be presented for consideration, they deeming it not necessary, in the first place, and also claiming that after the 19th of last May said committee died, so far as its usefulness as a political factor is concerned.

The La Follette faction will be on hand with the side of the argument, and in all probability will get the decision with whatever honor goes with it. It seems to be the opinion of the radical leaders here that the governor desires that the old state central committee shall act on the matter next Monday without regard to the supreme court case. This desire of the governor is said to be prompted by the fact that he wishes the decision of the committee to use in his speeches as a bolster to the claim that he had a majority of delegates in the state convention and was thus entitled to the nomination.

It is understood that H. W. Chynoweth and several of the other La Follette leaders are opposed to having the committee taking action in the case prior to the supreme court decision for the reason that they fear such advance action may be construed by the people as a public announcement that the governor has no faith in a court decision being in his favor and may prejudice the case. As, however, the governor desires the committee act in the matter, it is likely that the committee decision will be rendered Monday afternoon, who desire the committee shall pass on the case Monday that the governor's own statement has shown he does not intend abiding by the supreme court decision, as he has publicly proclaimed that he shall remain in the field even if the decision be against him and that this announcement coupled with the utterances of the radical press, have already done all the harm which can be done along the line of prejudicing the people, and that for this reason there is no cause why the committee should not render its decision at this time.

The turntable consists of a pit walled with stone, across which is a bridge free at the ends but balanced at the center on a spindle. Rails are laid across this, as if it were part of the roadbed.

When the fire of the locomotive have been cared for the engineer runs his machine upon the table. With left hand at the throttle he brings it to a stop at the precise point where the hundred tons of steel balance on the spindle that supports the bridge. Then the ponderous mass is slowly revolved until the required track is reached and the engine is "backed into the roundhouse."

What the character of the new suit would be Mr. Kempf declared he did not know.

RUNAWAY MATCH; GO TO ROCKFORD

Miss Carrie Wood Weds Carlo Dodge In the Illinois Gretna Green.

Much mystery surrounded the disappearance of Miss Carrie Wood of this city last evening until a telegram was received from her, dated at Rockford, in which she announced her marriage to Mr. Carlo Dodge, Miss Wood, who has been employed for the past two years at the Parker Pen company, in charge of the order department, resigned her position last Saturday, telling her employers she was to be married. Last evening she told her family that she was going to Beloit to attend a surprise party to be given Mrs. Lefter, a former employee of the Parker Pen company who was married two months ago. Later in the evening the following dispatch was received by her parents, dated Rockford: "Married tonight; gone east; back in a few days. (Signed) Carrie." The groom, Mr. Carlo Dodge, is a printer, and is well-known in the city. He expected very shortly to remove to California with his family and it is thought that this decision hastened the marriage. Miss Wood is very highly thought of by her former employers, having been one of their most trusted clerks in the office force. Mr. Parker said this morning that Miss Wood had held the position of order clerk, which office carried a strong responsibility with it, and was the most eagerly sought for of all the office positions. As Mr. Parker expressed it, it was a sure road to matrimony, the last five girls holding the position having all resigned to be married. It is thought by Miss Wood's friends that she went to Rockford on the six o'clock car and was married immediately and left for the east at once.

The French Journals inform us of a very charming innovation in the mode of serving desert on the table at very grand banquets. It is very costly and for that reason will hardly be very extensively adopted. The fruit instead of being placed in dishes is brought in, still growing, in pots. Pear, cherries, peaches, grapes, plums, figs, etc., are placed on tables in growing, the pots standing on silver sockets or on trays. Strawberries, peaches, etc., are obtained. George B. Smith was nominated yesterday by the copperheads at the Watertown convention, as their candidate for congress in this district.

The folks at St. Louis are having a lively dance of terror just now. Seven and a half hundred lately imported from the east escaped from the tank in which they had been kept, and after a three days' search, had, at last accounts, not been captured.

The French Journals inform us of a very charming innovation in the mode of serving desert on the table at very grand banquets. It is very costly and for that reason will hardly be very extensively adopted. The fruit instead of being placed in dishes is brought in, still growing, in pots. Pear, cherries, peaches, grapes, plums, figs, etc., are placed on tables in growing, the pots standing on silver sockets or on trays. Strawberries, peaches, etc., are obtained. A pot containing a strawberry plant in full bearing is placed before each guest.

GENERAL KING WAS APPOINTED

Has a Four Year Appointment with the State Militia of Wisconsin.

General Charles King of Milwaukee was yesterday appointed by the war department for duty with the Wisconsin militia for four years with headquarters at Madison. General King is a graduate of West Point and retired from the regular army some years ago, owing to ill health. During the Spanish war he was made a brigadier general of volunteers and saw much active service in the Philippines. He later came home and now makes his home in Milwaukee. During Governor Upham's administration he was adjutant general of the state. He has also been military instructor at the state university. His present appointment is under the new law which is supposed to increase the efficiency of the state guard throughout the country. In accordance with the act of congress passed last April, department officials say, Gen. King, while on this detail, will receive full pay and allowances. The order of the department for this detail of Gen. King was made at the request of Gov. La Follette.

News for the Railroad Men.

The cattle shippers of the west are insisting that the Interstate commerce commission be given the power to say what are unlawful rates and to compel their correction. With this end in view the Cattle Growers' Interstate executive committee, with headquarters in Denver, has issued a pamphlet called the "Transportation Tax," which charges that the railroads are practicing extortion on the cattle growers in that they exact fully 25 per cent per cent of the value of a beef animal in the course of its travels from birth to the slaughterhouse.

WHAT MERCHANTS SAY OF CARNIVAL

WHICH FERARI PEOPLE PROPOSE TO CONDUCT HERE.

COUNCIL MEETING TONIGHT

To Take Up This Question, and Matter of Interurban Franchise Extension.

Yesterday afternoon a representative of the Ferrari Bros. carnival shows which have been on exhibition at the state fair in Milwaukee visited the city and after conferring with the mayor and aldermen secured what was virtually permission to occupy the streets with their tented exhibitions on the week of September 19. Aldermen Jackman and Comstock were out of the city. Alderman Matheson disapproved because he did not believe such shows helped the city. The other aldermen, men whom he had conferred with, sharing the opinion, and because it was his personal impression that such shows were rather demoralizing than elevating. Alderman Merrill did not believe that the shows should come here without paying a license as it would cost the city $75 to clean up after them; nor did he believe they should be allowed to monopolize the business streets. If the shows were high class and not like the ones that exhibited here before and if they would subscribe to the conditions above enumerated, he was willing to give his consent. The six remaining aldermen, the mayor, and most of the other city officials were frankly in favor of the project.

Meeting Called Tonight
While a small coterie of the business and professional men sanctioned the movement, the great majority of the merchants were not consulted and there was a feeling this morning that the council had acted somewhat arbitrarily in granting a franchise without even calling a meeting.

While a small coterie of the business and professional men sanctioned the movement, the great majority of the merchants were not consulted and there was a feeling that the council had acted somewhat arbitrarily in granting a franchise without even calling a meeting. Upon discovering that such a feeling prevailed a special meeting of the council to take action on this question and that of the interurban franchise extension was therefore called for eight o'clock tonight.

Some Opinions Expressed
Several of the merchants on South Main and Milwaukee streets were interviewed this morning voiced very diverse opinions. Some were unqualifiedly in favor of the movement and others directly opposed to it. John Grubb said: "I don't think much of it. I wouldn't oppose it but it will not help us." O. D. Bates: "I want none of it in mine. Would give more to have it keep away than to have it come." J. H. Jones: "It is a regular nuisance and never ought to have been allowed a franchise."

McGee Young Coarse and Loud
J. M. McGee said: "From our experience with the previous one we are convinced that such institutions are a detriment to trade. I think they are bad things for the town. Young people who would not dare to molest people at any other time become too familiar, too free, especially in addressing young women. It makes for coarseness and loudness." C. B. Boatwick of the firm of R. M. Boatwick & Son replied with a question: "The town couldn't be much dearer than it is now, could it?"

Benefit One, Benefit All
McGee & Buss were in favor of the movement. J. Sutherland characterized it as a nuisance, of no benefit to the city. "Yes, let them have it," said C. Putnam. "It will draw people to the city. The people here are poor. Let them have it." S. A. H. Sheldon: "The last one broke up a week's trade for me. I am opposed to it. It diverts the people from trade and breaks up business. If it was a farmer's fair where there was an exchange of commodities, it would be all right. A few may benefit but enough more business men are injured to more than counterbalance the possible benefit to be derived. I am utterly opposed to it and the throwing away of good money."

Stores Will Entertain
Geo. D. Simpson said: "I am very much in favor of it. At this time of the year people are interested in the fall lines of merchandise. They will come to town and the stores will entertain them a part of the time. One good feature is that it comes without any cost to the city." "It is a good time for a carnival now," said W. C. Hart, F. J. Bailey of Bart, Bailey & Co. said: "This carnival is all that is like the one before he would subscribe money to keep it away from here. Louis Levy of the Golden Eagle store was in favor of the carnival, providing proper surveillance be kept. T. P. Burns said: "I don't care much about it, one way or another. I don't believe it will be of any great benefit to the city. It will certainly not help my business." Ross King of King & Cowles said: "From a business standpoint we might as well be closed during the carnival. But it will undoubtedly help all of us indirectly. If the restaurants, drugstores, and saloons make money they will spend more with the other merchants. Think it will be all right if run in a business-like manner."

Keeps Ladies Away
"I am very much opposed to it," said E. B. Helmstreet. "It will do nothing to help me financially and will be of no benefit to the city. It will make a difference in trade. The ladies will not come out evenings when the carnival is in progress. If it comes we will all do what we can to help it along, of course, but at the same time I, for one, don't want it." "When I was down in Albuquerque, New Mexico, we had a circus once a week and with less than half the population of Janesville, it was a bigger town and much more business was done there," said John Fletcher of the Milwaukee Elevator Co.

A Madison division freight train, which left the city last evening about 10:30 o'clock over the Evansville cut-off, met with an accident about one mile and a half from the city, when one of the cars loaded with windmills belonging to the United States Windmill company of Batavia, Ill., which were consigned to North Dakota consumers, left the track. The breaking of a truck wheel is believed to be the cause of the wreck, although the train was going at a low rate of speed when the car left the track. No one was injured. The passenger trains due here at 11 and 12 o'clock last evening were sent around by the way of Afton, as were also the morning trains until after 11 o'clock this morning. The Madison division wrecking crew from Daraboo was sent for and arrived this morning about 8 o'clock and the car was soon put on the track and the line open for traffic.

DID NOT MAKE A BEST OF STARTS

Groth, the Port Washington Pitcher Lost His First Big Game.

Emil Groth, the former Port Washington pitcher, who has been seen at Yost's park this summer and was given his first chance in the National league yesterday by Manager Sweeney of the Chicago team, Groth opposed the great "Kid" Nichols, pitching manager of the St. Louis Browns, and lost his game by a score of 4 to 1. It was a mistake to put in a green pitcher for his first game against such a man as Charley Nichols. Groth pitched good ball and only allowed six hits, but Nichols yielded but two hits to the Cubs, and they never had a chance to win. Groth will do better under fair conditions.

BIG SLUMP IN SCHOOL CENSUS

TOTAL IS 417 LESS THAN LAST YEAR'S MARK.

CITY TO LOSE ABOUT $800

From the State Appropriation by Reason Thereof—Fourth Wards' Large Decrease.

Race suicide or what? The report of the census taker shows a falling off of 417 in the number of children of school age in the city of Janesville in the space of one year. Parents who have sent their children to school are to be congratulated. For Janesville will lose about $2 each for every child that has turned up missing this year. The city's share of the state appropriation will be cut down $800. There are found to be 1,963 boys and 1,556 girls within the school age, besides 148 who attend private institutions. There is one deaf and dumb child and four feeble minded children. Last year the report showed 2,208 boys, 2,228 girls, and a total of 4,436.

Surplus of Boys
While there was a surplus of girls last year the tables are turned this year. The fourth ward shows a falling off of 103 boys and 96 girls this year, making a total lacking one, of 199 children. In not one ward in the city is an increase either in boys or girls of school age shown. S. C. Burnham's report shows:

	Male	Female	Total
First ward	388	370	758
Second ward	286	259	545
Third ward	441	415	856
Fourth ward	533	578	1,111

Here Is a Question: Magistrate Pool of New York laid down a unique ruling in cases of saloon brawls. Two negroes were brought before him, one having charged the other with disorderly conduct and attempting to cut the plaintiff with a razor. The question is: does it hold good in Janesville?"

To Sell Circus: Janesville people who have in past years gloried in the wonders of the old Adam Forepaugh circus and later in the Sells-Foranpaugh aggregation, will be sorry to learn that the great circus is to be sold at auction. Cole, owners of the Barnum & Bailey circus, are part owners with Peter and Lewis Sells. Peter Sells of Columbus suffered a paralytic stroke two weeks ago, and decided to part with the property. At a conference between the Sells Brothers, Mr. Bailey and Mr. Cole, it was decided to sell the show under the hammer. Mr. Bailey and Mr. Cole having no desire to add to their circus property.

PRETTY PARTY OF GLADYS FRANKLIN

Celebrated Her Tenth Birthday in a Most Enjoyable Manner on Wednesday.

Gladys Franklin entertained a company of her little friends on her tenth birthday at her home, No. 1 Hyatt street, Wednesday evening, in a most enjoyable manner. At six o'clock they assembled in the dining-room where they did justice to a bountiful supper that was daintily served. The table was tastefully decorated in white daisies; the curtains were drawn, while under the gas-light shone ten little candles which lit up the happy faces, which will long be remembered. The evening was spent in playing music and games. Many were the regrets as the hour of departing came.

MAKING OF BIG TEAM IS STARTED

Curtis, Cochems, Bush and Kilpat. Pick at Work on Wisconsin Foot-ball Players.

The making of the University of Wisconsin football team of 1904 is in the hands of four men—Head Coach Arthur Hale Curtis, Assistant Coach Edward B. Cochems, Captain Ervin J. Bush and Graduate Manager Chas. H. Kilpatrick. Crew Coach Andy M. O'Dea and Trainer John Hickey will also be useful, but the important and responsible work will be done by the leading quartet.

Head Coach Curtis is a Madison boy; a graduate of the high school and university at Madison and the first graduate football coach ever had at the University of Wisconsin.

Assistant Coach Cochems comes of a colorful athletic family of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and was a former star end and halfback on the university team.

Captain Bush grew up in Milwaukee, but has recently moved to Racine. His record at right end on the varsity eleven has been brilliant and much is expected of him this fall as captain. Graduate Manager Kilpatrick is an eastern man, the holder of the world's record for the half-mile run and has been coach of the Wisconsin track teams for the last five years. As graduate manager of athletics he makes all contracts, provides all supplies and is the "material source" in the training quarters.

Read what your fellow townsman says:

I wish to testify to my appreciation of the D. D. D. Remedy for Eczema. Four years ago I took my daughter, whose face had been badly broken out for a long time to Chicago, and consulted there one of the highest authorities on diseases of the blood in regard to her case, after a thorough examination he prescribed for her, she took his medicine and followed his directions faithfully for over three years with no improvement; last fall I saw a display of the D. D. D. remedy in Chicago and bought a bottle to try, with that one bottle her face was wholly cleansed up and has remained so now for twelve months and it seems to be permanent. And that guaranty is worth one hundred cents on the dollar to you. It means that you are to be satisfied with the garments when you get them—satisfied that they were made expressly for you, to your own measure—and it means that they will wear well, give you good service, and hold their shape as rightly-tailored garments should.

The cost of Royal tailoring is so low that you might almost think price was the first consideration. But it isn't. Value is first. Value-giving is at the basis of The Royal Tailors' success. The best for the money always—that is the Royal idea.

Customers of The Royal Tailors are invited to guess how many people will attend the World's Fair at St. Louis. They offer prizes consisting of ten Automobiles, to be given to the ten persons making the closest guesses. The cost of these Automobiles is $13,700. There are also eight cash prizes of $100 each, making the total value of the prizes $14,500. For every dollar you pay on an order for Royal tailoring you can make one guess on a $15 suit you can make twenty guesses, and so on—a guess for every dollar.

The Royal Tailors carry a million-dollar stock of woollens—something sure to please everybody; suits and overcoats for men and boys—ladies' man-tailored skirts and coats—all made strictly to measure at an actual proven cash saving of fully twenty-five per cent.

But the thing to do is to see the goods and get the prices. You can do that by calling on

LITTLE FRANCE

A ROMANCE OF THE DAYS WHEN "THE GREAT LORD HAWKE" WAS KING OF THE SEA.

BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

Author of "Commodore Paul Jones," "Ruben James," "For the Freedom of the Sea," etc.

Copyright, 1904, by H. Appleton & Co., New York.

Anne de Rohan was now 18 years of age and in the first flush of beautiful womanhood. Of medium height, with a figure which combined the lovely proportions of her American ancestry with the daintiness and delicacy of the women of France; with a clear, cool, pale yet not pallid face, exquisite features, scarlet lips, proudly, ay, even disdainfully elegant in their graceful curves; deep blue eyes, so deep that they were almost violet when filled with feeling or glowing with passion, and the whole framed in her midnight hair; she was indeed a rarely beautiful woman. The performance of her maturity was indeed greater than her childhood's promise had been. Only a prophet might have seen the one in the past, or a seer recognize the other in the present.

A strange concatenation of circumstances had brought the girl to New France. After Grafton's departure from the chateau de Josselin she had drooped and faded. She was growing too rapidly, thought the marquis and those who advised him, who never suspected the real reason for her ill health. She actually had pined for the young man who had left her behind and yet had taken her childish heart with him. But of this, of course, she said nothing, so the wise men concluded that she had studied too hard, had been too closely confined, and so on. The physicians who were consulted, after the simple remedies of the time had proved unavailing, finally recommended a sea-voyage.

As it happened, the marquis had just then been summoned to the King to take part as a commander in one of the campaigns of the Seven Years' war, his experience and ability being too valuable to allow him to be neglected. The old man, therefore, had taken advantage of the departure of a heavy French squadron, carrying general, the Marquis de Montcalm, his suite, and some troops, to send his grand-daughter to Canada under the charge of the general, an old friend, who had been appointed to the supreme command in New France. An ancient relative of the house of Rohan lived in affluence and ease in Quebec, and to her the marquis consigned the young countess.

She had remained in New France with this estimable lady ever since her arrival, for two reasons: One, it had been difficult—well-nigh impossible, indeed, on account of the number of English ships cruising to intercept the traffic between Canada and France—to get away; and the other, as the marquis was still engaged in the French army, she would have no place to which to go, no place where she could have lived so comfortably and safely if she returned to France. The marquis was determined that he would not throw her into the hands of dissipation and intrigue of which Louis XV. was the focus, in Paris or at Versailles.

Her health, much benefitted by the voyage, was soon completely restored, and with her great beauty, her ancient name, her powerful grandfather, the great estates to which she was sole heiress, she became, as childhood gave way to womanhood, the undoubted belle of New France. The officers of the army, the sea officers from the various ships or squadrons which from time to time arrived from France, the young Canadian nobles, all laid their hearts at her feet. She could have chosen any one from among them, but as yet none of them had succeeded in touching her heart. Most of them she liked and the society of many of them she enjoyed.

Among the many she had met who had paid court to her, the man she most liked, and who was, in fact, perhaps the finest among them, was the young sailor to whom, in fear of her love for Grafton, she had just engaged herself. She had refused his suit many times before, but with undaunted gallantry he had persisted in his attentions.

How her grandfather, the marquis, would regard the engagement upon which she had so suddenly and capriciously entered was problematical. In fact, she felt that he would disapprove; but while she was wholly French in her training and in her ideas she was not for nothing the daughter of an American mother. She combined a determination to exercise a certain liberty of choice as to the disposition of her heart and person with the stubborn, inflexible will power of her grandfather. Therefore, she could meet the certain antagonism of the marquis with two weapons—his own and her mother's. She trusted also that no might be won to her view; she was sure he would rather see her dead than have her marry an Englishman, an enemy, and she hoped, when she explained to him that in utter despair she had thrown herself into the arms of the one to escape the promptings of her heart, which would fain have thrown her into the arms of the other, that he would acquiesce.

She had no one to advise her, poor child! The ancient relative to whose care she had been committed, had died a few weeks since of the cancer, angina, and privations brought about by the siege. An ordinary French girl would have gone to a convent under the circumstances, but Anne possessed a certain amount of self-reliance and independence, and she resolved, for the time being, at least, to remain at her own house with old Jean Renaud and Josette. If the English were driven away she made up her mind that at any hazard she would take ship for France. If, on the contrary, the English captured the town she would probably be sent back a prisoner. So she awaited the issue of the campaign, in the meantime busying herself with caring for the sick and wounded.

It was evening. She stood by the dormer window looking out on the street. Grafton watched her closely from the bed. She had stopped a moment to inquire for him, her third and to be her last visit that day, and then, attracted by a commotion outside, she had gone to the window.

A little cortege filed the street below. Some soldiers bore upon their shoulders a rude wooden box. Over it was laid the golden-limbed white flag of France, and upon the flag a handsome sword. A half-dozen men, holding pine torches whose flickering, wavering flames cast an uncertain illumination over the scene, walked by the makeshift coffin. Immediately behind came a few priests, and then Monsieur du Ramesay and his staff, and a little huddle of townspeople—the idle and the curious.

There were no strains of martial music; there was neither blare of bugle nor roll of drum, nor tolling bells. There was no ceremony, no pomp; there were no women even.

Anne leaned her head upon the casement, her tears falling softly. Her body shook with sobs. Grafton stared at her keenly and curiously. There was a strange pain at his heart when he saw her weep.

Presently the funeral procession passed the window. The lights from the torches, almost at a level with her face in the window of the low-studded old house, threw it into high and bright relief. She was off her guard, not thinking of herself or even of Grafton, for the moment. It was the first time that he had been able to see her well. Suggestions of the truth came across him with a sense of shock, and yet he did not quite recognize her. He was not sure. It could not be.

"Mademoiselle," he said softly, "you told me your name was—"

"De Couedic. Yes, monsieur," she answered, with her eyes still fixed upon the street, though he noticed that she turned her face away from him.

Was she discovered at last? Could he suspect, she thought.

"I had thought," he continued, then he stopped.

"Mademoiselle, you weep," he said. "Yes, monsieur."

"Who passes in the street? Those lights, what are they?"

"Monsieur, a funeral."

"Whose funeral, mademoiselle?"

"Alas, monsieur, I think it is the burial of New France!"

"Mademoiselle?"

"'Tis the funeral of the Marquis de Montcalm, monsieur. He is being borne to his last rest."

"He was a brave man, Mademoiselle de Couedic, and he died as a soldier would fall, die, in the front of the battle line."

"He was my grandfather's friend, monsieur, and mine. He was so good to me. I know his wife, his children. He loved them and longed to go back to them. But he loved his country, his duty, his king, more than all, monsieur, and so he stayed, and now he will never go back any more."

She put her face down in her hands and sobbed bitterly. People are as little children when they weep. Where had he seen that bowed head? Heavens! was it not upon his own shoulder? Why, the picture was the same! The moonlight was stealing through the casement just as before. She wore something filmy and white. It might have been that night-robe that had enshrouded the slender girl. His heart beat so that it nearly suffocated him, and yet—do Couedic? It could not be!

"Mademoiselle," he said, all the passion surging in his soul quivering in his voice, "do not weep. By heaven, I do not know how or why it is, but to see you weep tears my very heart! Can it be that I saw you but yesterday and loved you, mademoiselle?"

She turned and faced him. The feeling in his voice, the look in his eyes, as she stared at him, so perfectly matched her own she had no will power to withstand any longer. Deliberately she fetched a light from behind the curtain and set it down on the table at the head of his bed; then she stood where the full light would fall on her face, and drawing herself up threw out her arms wide before him.

"Monsieur!" she cried. "Oh, do you not know me?"

"Is it thou, Little France?" he exclaimed, dazed and bewildered by his thoughts. "Who could have thought it? How beautiful!"

She dashed away the tears with her hand. She thought he had not yet recognized her, as he lay spellbound gazing on her matchless beauty. Her scarlet lips quivered a moment, then shaped themselves for sound, and from her full, soft throat came the notes of the little Breton cradle-song which he had heard her sing in the garden of the Hesperides, "Toute, la, la!" But no mother ever sang it to child, as she sang it then.

"Anne!" he cried. "The Lady Anne! Fool that I was! How blind! I should have known you! I should have recognized your footsteps even had I lain dead at your doorstep!"

"Sir Phillip! Sir Phillip!" she exclaimed. "How could you forget? But I knew! Oh, my love, my love!"

She sank on her knees at the bedside again and leaned over him. "But you are betrothed to de Vitre?" he cried in jealous anguish.

"Ah, Phillip, my knight!" she murmured. "What matters it? 'Tis you I love, I love!"

She threw her arms around his neck; their lips met in one long kiss charged with dreams and ideals of years. The joy, the surprise, were almost too great for him. He closed his eyes; in his weak state he thought he would have fainted. It had all come upon him suddenly with such a shock. She had known it for two days. He had been so desperately wounded.

She was the stronger of the two then and she recovered herself the sooner. Something assisted her perhaps. Her throbbing breast as it lay upon his own was met by the pressure of something round and hard. The little locket! It flashed into her jealous mind in an instant.

"Monsieur Grafton," she said, drawing away from him with a sudden change of mood, "you not only forgot me, you not only did not know me, but you— That locket, sir?"

"Yes, mademoiselle," answered Grafton simply, for it was impossible for him to deceive this woman, or to evade the question.

"Ah! Carrying another woman's fate over your heart and speaking love to me!"

"O Anne!" he cried, "there may be another woman in the locket, there is only yourself in my heart!"

"Whose picture is there?"

"I may not tell."

"Monsieur will not tell?"

"Nay, I can not. 'Tis honor seals my lips."

He wished he had never given the promise so lightly uttered in the cabin of the Sutherland, but, being given, it must be faithfully kept.

"The honor of a woman?" she asked.

"Of a man, mademoiselle, of a soldier, of a friend."

"Explain yourself, monsieur."

"Mademoiselle Anne, I can not, but I give you my word of honor as an English officer, the word of an American gentleman, your mother's land, mademoiselle, that the lady of the locket is nothing to me, that I cherish the face of no woman except your own. Ever since those days when I was held a prisoner in the old chateau, since the hour—do you recall it?—when I carried you in my arms and kissed you first, I have loved you. I have thought and dreamed of you alone among woman-kind. When I went away from France I left my heart behind. You have had it— you have it now."

"But the locket?" she persisted, while the music of his words rang sweetly in the most secret chamber of her heart.

"Forget it."

"Take it off, then."

"I can not."

"Can not? And yet she is nothing to you, you say?"

"Even so, yet that little thing I can not do. I have sworn never to part with it until—"

"Ah, monsieur!" she continued bitterly, turning away. "You see! What can I believe?"

"Believe only that I love you; trust in my honor; you will laugh at this, we will laugh together, when I am able to tell you some day. In the meantime have faith in me. Won't you trust me?" he continued, as she shook her head. "Twice I might have died if it had not been for you. Twice you have called me back to life. My life is yours, and yours is mine. I will not be denied."

He turned and stretched out his one uninjured hand. "Come back. If there is the faintest feeling of affection in your own heart, if you know what love is, you must know 'tis here!"

She hesitated, she moved nearer, hesitated again. He strove to rise, wrenched his arm, covered his eyes with his hand, stifled a moan. That decided her. He suffered, and she fled to him once again, a little murmuring cry, an inarticulate caress on her lips. Oh, the ecstasy of that moment!

We live long years for the emotions of an hour, the pleasure of a second. We waste lifetimes in solitary kisses, and the sum of dreams is gone in a single touch.

Anne de Rohan was promised to de Vitre. She meant to keep her promise. She was wildly, bitterly jealous of the woman in the locket, too, in spite of his assurances, although she really believed them, and she had never intended this. She knew she could never be anything to Grafton. Her reason, her sense, told her that this was folly, but the determination of her mind was abrogated by the feelings of her heart. Perhaps because she knew there was nothing beyond she gave way the more easily to her emotions. The flood-gates were open again, the long-pent-up floods were out once more. Ah, this time there would be no confining them again!

She knelt beside that old bed, she slipped her fair, round young arm underneath his neck and lavished caresses upon him. Her hands played with the curls upon his forehead. Her eyes looked love in his, her voice whispdearments in broken tones; all her being went out to meet his. She was trembling with her passion, nervous at his touch; she could not be quiet, she must move or die. She hovered over him like an angel of love and tenderness.

He lay there so white, so pale, so weak, so happy, with a love that was as strong as hers looking from his eyes. His one free hand she held tightly, pressed it to her breast, kissed it, fondled it again and again.

And how beautiful she was! One look in the unfathomable depths of those great eyes might have told him the truth before. The sound of that voice quivering with joy that was almost pain should have spoken to him. How blind he had been—a fool! He forgot five years of separation and grieved that he had lost one day! The past faded away, the future lay in the distance, the present was their own.

Presently, as the first fierce intensity of her passion spent itself, she laid her head upon his breast and listened in sweet surrender to the beating of his heart, hearing that heart throbbing for her, only for her. The room was very still. Words were never coined to express what they felt, and neither spoke.

It was dark outside. The night had fallen. Clouds had swept across the face of the moon, hiding its splendor. The sky was overcast, muttered peals of thunder rolled swiftly through the chamber. The candle had burned itself out, it flickered away; the gray shadows grew into darkness. It was deep and still there. In that silence heart whispered to heart in language which gods and lovers may understand. Bye-and-bye her arm was slipped from beneath his head. Had hours or moments passed, or had they lived an eternity since the kiss of recognition? Her head, that had lain so lightly upon his breast, was lifted. The sweet lips, whose color he could dream of even in the darkness, melted once again upon his own—and she was gone.

He had not moved or stirred. After she left him the sweet illusion was still heavy upon him. He could feel the presence of her head, the perfume, the fragrance of her hair, the beating of her heart. He closed his eyes in the darkness. Her lips seemed to brush his own again—again.

Did he sleep, did he dream? All night long she seemed to be by his side.

Same Idea Various Expressions. It is curious to trace how similar ideas have taken root in different languages and the various modes of illustrating the same thought. To take, for instance, one or two familiar proverbs in our language. We say, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." The same idea is expressed by Italians when they say, "Better an egg today than a pullet to-morrow," and the French proverb is still more significant, "One here-it is better than two you-shall-have-it."

Goggles for Chickens. Among the recent inventions which poultry fanciers find interesting at the world's fair is a pair of goggles to be placed on chickens to prevent them from pecking out the eyes of one another. Pugnaciously inclined birds on a farm can do a great deal of harm to the others, and, as a protection against damage being sustained to the eyes, it is proposed to equip the members of the flock with the goggles.

Word "Weigh" Too Much for Him. A London jurymen fainting the other day while the judge was charging the body. The judge was saying: "You must give the statements of the witnesses for the defense full weight." At the words, "full weight," the jurymen fainted. Later, it was found that he was a coal dealer.

Not a Lucrative Business. Dr. Smiles did not leave so much money behind him as did Sir H. M. Stanley; but in his case more than in Stanley's the amount is likely to represent literary earnings. At any rate, $370,000 is not considered a bad recompense for "self-help," when applied in a calling which, apart from the more signal successes of a few novelists and playwrights, rarely leads on to such fortunes as are made in soaps or pills.

Automobile Fishing Boats. Fishermen on the Lake of Neuchatel are using automobile boats. They are driven by a benzine motor and lighted by electricity. They are flat-bottomed, glide noiselessly over the water, do not frighten the fish and are a great success.

ROCK ISLAND CLIQUE CONTROLS ALTON STOCK

John W. Gates and Others Block
Plan of Harriman et al. to Buy
Up the Road.

New York, Sept. 9.—It was reported in Wall street Friday that John W. Gates, Edwin Hawley, and the Rock Island syndicate, who are heavy holders of Chicago & Alton stock, are blocking the plan of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Harriman to buy up the Alton stock at $50 for the common and $80 for the preferred. The three opposing interests are operating separately.

At Kuhn, Loeb & Co.'s it was said that the firm had no statement to make.

The Wall Street Journal says: "We are in a position to state that at the annual meeting of the Chicago & Alton next month proxies for more than a majority of the stock will be in the hands of people representing interests other than the Harriman interests."

"Alton has been bought in the open market during the past two years by a group of men who do not represent any one railroad, but none of whom are unfriendly toward, and most of whom are in close connection with the Rock Island company."

"The syndicate began buying its securities in the middle of the very bad market last year, and had acquired almost a majority of the stock at the time when Kuhn, Loeb & Co. called for deposits of preferred stock under a pool arrangement, giving voting power to that firm over the closing of the books for the annual meeting this year. The fact that outside interests now hold control would indicate that the deposit of preferred stock failed in its object."

They will also submit a plan for the establishment of state workhouses and the abolishment of county jails.
